NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

VALERIA BRUSCO is Assistant Professor of Political Theory at the National University of Villa Maria, Córdoba, Argentina, and a CONICET (Consejo de Investigaciones Científicas y Tecnológicas) doctoral student. She is the director of the Centro de Estudios Políticos y Sociales (CEPYS). Her research interests include political clientelism, social capital, and women and politics.

SARAH CLINE is Professor of History at the University of California at Santa Barbara and currently Director of Latin American and Iberian Studies, an interdisciplinary undergraduate and graduate degree program. She has published extensively on early colonial Mexican history and now is pursuing a number of projects on late colonial and early nineteenth-century Mexico. In collaboration with Ida Altman and Javier Pescador, she published The Early History of Greater Mexico (Prentice Hall, 2003).

JAVIER CORRALES is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Amherst College in Amherst, Massachusetts. He is the author of Presidents Without Parties: the Politics of Economic Reform in Argentina and Venezuela in the 1990s (Penn State Press, 2002). His research on the politics of economic and second-generation reforms has been published in several book chapters and academic journals. He was one of the youngest scholars to be selected as a Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, D.C., in 2000. He is currently working on a project on political responses to economic crises in Latin America.

susan DEEDS is Professor of History at Northern Arizona University. Her publications on missions and northern Mexican ethnohistory include "Legacies of Resistance, Adaptation, and Tenacity: History of the Native Peoples of Northwest Mexico," published in The Cambridge History of the Native Peoples of the Americas (Cambridge University Press, 2000); and Defiance and Deference in Colonial Mexico: Indians under Spanish Rule in Nueva Vizcaya (University of Texas Press, 2003). She is also co-author (Michael C. Meyer and William L. Sherman) of the textbook, The Course of Mexican History, 7th ed. (Oxford University Press, 2003).

PAULO DRINOT is Junior Lecturer in Latin American History at the University of Oxford. He has published on Peruvian historiography, economic history, and labor history. He is working on two projects: a history of prostitution in Lima in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and a history of state-society relations in Ayacucho, Peru, that focuses on primary education and military conscription in the first half of the twentieth century.

DAMIAN J. FERNÁNDEZ is Professor of International Relations at Florida International University. He is the author of Cuba and the Politics of Passion (University of Texas, 2000) and the co-editor of Cuba, The Elusive Nation: Reinterpretations of National Identity (University Press of Florida, 2000). ROBERTO GARGARELLA is Professor of Constitutional Theory and Political Philosophy at the Universidad de Buenos Aires and at the Universidad Torcuato Di Tella. He holds a Doctor of Law degree from the Universidad de Buenos Aires and a J.D. from the University of Chicago, and conducted his post-doctoral research at Balliol College, Oxford. In recent years he has held a Harry Frank Guggenheim Fellowship (2002) and a John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship (2000).

PAUL GOOTENBERG is Professor of History and Director of Latin American and Caribbean Studies at Stony Brook University. He has written extensively on economic history, most recently on the history of the Andean commodity, cocaine.

MAURO F. GUILLÉN is the Dr. Felix Zandman Professor of International Management and Professor of Sociology at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and a Visiting Professor at the Instituto de Empresa in Madrid. His research has to do with the impact of globalization and the spread of practices, innovations, and cultural artifacts around the world.

HENDRIK KRAAY is Associate Professor of History and Political Science at the University of Calgary. He is the author of Race, State, and Armed Forces in Independence-Era Brazil: Bahia, 1790s–1840s (Stanford University Press, 2001) and has edited Afro-Brazilian Culture and Politics: Bahia, 1790s–1990s (M.E. Sharpe, 1998) and (with Thomas L. Whigham) Muero con Mi Patria: Perspectives on the Paraguayan War (University of Nebraska Press, forthcoming).

JOSEPH LOVE is Professor of History and former Director of Latin American Studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He is the author of Rio Grande do Sul and Brazilian Regionalism, Sao Paulo in the Brazilian Federation, and Crafting the Third World: Theorizing Underdevelopment in Rumania and Brazil, all with Stanford University Press.

ELIZABETH MCQUERRY is Assistant Vice President at the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. She is responsible for establishing international automated clearinghouse connections for the Reserve Banks and their customers. She earned a doctorate in Government from the University of Texas at Austin.

ALEJANDRO METER is Assistant Professor of Spanish and Latin American Studies at the University of San Diego. His current research focuses on post-dictatorial Southern Cone literature and Latin American Jewish studies. He is the editor of Literatura Judía en América Latina, a special volume of Revista Iberoamericana (2000). He is currently working on a book on collective memory in Argentine Jewish fiction.

MARCELO NAZARENO is a doctoral candidate in FLACSO-Argentina and Assistant Professor of Political Science at Universidad Nacional de Córdoba and of Policy Analysis at Universidad Católica de Córdoba. His research interests include political mobilization and institutional structure, with a focus on local governance and development, and political relations between subnational and central governments in federal polities.

302 Latin American Research Review

FREDERICK M. NUNN is Professor Emeritus of History and International Studies, Portland State University, and Visiting Professor of History and Latin American Studies, University of Arizona. He has published books and articles on Latin American and comparative military-civilian relations as well as Latin American literature and history.

CHRISTOPHER SCHMIDT-NOWARA received his doctorate from the University of Michigan in 1995. He is a member of the History Department, Fordham University, where he is also Director of the Latin American and Latino Studies Institute. He is the author of Empire and Antislavery: Spain, Cuba, and Puerto Rico, 1833–1874 (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1999) and is currently at work on a manuscript entitled The Conquest of History: Spanish Colonialism and National Histories in the Nineteenth Century, also to be published by the University of Pittsburgh Press.

PETER M. SIAVELIS is Associate Professor of Political Science at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. He is the author of The President and Congress in Post-authoritarian Chile: Institutional Constraints to Democratic Consolidation (Pennsylvania State University Press, 2000), and articles and book chapters on Chilean electoral and legislative politics.

ANTHONY SPANAKOS is a Fulbright Visiting Fellow at the Departments of International Relations and Political Science at the University of Brasilia. He is currently an Assistant Professor at Touro College and Adjunct Assistant Professor at Long Island University. He was previously a visiting assistant professor at Manhattanville College, Special Projects coordinator at City University of New York's Bildner Center, and Visiting Lecturer at Tufts University.

SUSAN C. STOKES is Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago and director of the Chicago Center on Democracy. Her recent publications include Mandates and Democracy: Neoliberalism by Surprise in Latin America (Cambridge University Press, 2001) and the collection Public Support for Market Reform in New Democracies (Cambridge University Press, 2001).