New Edition
Charles W. Hayford

The World Bibliographical Series from ABC-CLIO has long been recognised as setting an unmatched standard of excellence. With over 200 volumes published to date, this series will eventually cover every country in the world - providing, in a uniform format, an interpretation of each country that expresses its culture, its place in the world, and the qualities and background that make it unique.

In February 1997, a completely revised and updated edition of China was added to the series. This selective, multi-disciplinary bibliography contains over 1,500 entries, primarily relating to recent English-language books. Of particular interest are the sections on Mao Zedong's life and thought; human rights and democracy; the crisis of 1989 and its aftermath; tradition and revolution in the countryside; science and technology; medicine; cooking and food history; and women, sex and gender studies.

The entries are all fully annotated, and materials covered include books, maps, journal articles, periodicals, newspapers, government reports, dissertations, and more.

The author Charles W. Hayford has taught at Harvard University, Oberlin College, the Chinese University of Hong Kong, the University of Illinois at Chicago, Northwestern University and Stanford University. Dr Hayford's scholarly publications are principally concerned with modern Chinese social and cultural history as well as Sino-US relations. From 1990-94 he was Book Review Editor (China/Inner Asia) for the Journal of Asian Studies.
