Greek Architects at Work

Problems of Structure and Design

J. J. COULTON

Lecturer in Classical Archaeology, University of Edinburgh

The advent of monumental architecture in Greece about 650 B.C. presented architects with an entirely new conception of scale and space. Dr Coulton looks at Greek architecture from the point of view of the architects – their status, aspirations, methods and problems. His book covers the period from the early seventh century B.C. to the first century B.C. It is written with the minimum of technical terms and generously illustrated with photographs and diagrams (fifty-three drawn specially by the author) of temples and public buildings in Greece, Asia Minor and Sicily.

‘... every student will want his Greek Architects at Work ... line drawings which are a notable feature ... excellent ... the study of Greek architecture has been greatly enriched’ The Times Literary Supplement

Parthian Art

MALCOLM A. R. COLLEDGE

Reader in Classics, Westfield College, University of London

The conquest of western and central Asia by Alexander the Great, and the subsequent settlement by the Greeks of the lands between Syria and north-west Pakistan, profoundly affected Asiatic cultural developments. While some Greek and some Asiatic builders and artists maintained their separate traditions for centuries, others were soon mixing the two styles. This process was further complicated by the arrival of the Parthians – an Iranian and formerly nomadic people – who gave their name to an empire finally embracing Iran, Mesopotamia, and much of western Asia, and lasting from the mid third century B.C. to about A.D. 224–7. The story of what happened to the advanced Greek and Asiatic cultures under the domination of the Parthians is the theme of this book. Dr Colledge questions the justification of the term ‘Parthian’ art, arguing that the Parthians’ own artistic contribution was surprisingly small – each region preserved a striking cultural independence as the fascinatingly diverse illustrations show. Helpful appendices include Principal Scripts, Chronological Eras and King Lists and Royal Genealogies.

Greek Literary Hands A.D. 400-1600

R. Barbour

---

Books in this series offer the student of palaeography, in summary form, the results of research over the last fifty years and serve as a basis for future research work. The author has achieved the maximum display of evidence by reproducing small specimens of writing (all full size) from 110 manuscripts which can be assigned to reasonably certain dates, and, where possible, places or copyists. She briefly describes each manuscript, and provides a transcription and list of other published facsimiles. Illustrated £8.50 Oxford Palaeographical Handbooks

The Architectural Development of the Greek Stoa

J. J. Coulton

---

The stoa, a free-standing portico or arcade, was a characteristic feature of the ancient Greek way of life; almost every market place and shrine had at least one sometimes of enormous dimensions. Dr. Coulton discusses the origins of the stoa, traces its historical development, and describes the architecture of the various types. Illustrated £15 Oxford Monographs on Classical Archaeology

Rhodian Funerary Monuments

P. M. Fraser

---

This book contains a stylistic and historical analysis of the Rhodian funerary monuments of all periods of antiquity, and more particularly of the later Hellenistic period, when Rhodes was among the largest and most prosperous cities of the Eastern Aegean. The material includes, in addition to that in the museums of the Dodecanese, all Rhodian and associated monuments in European museums. Illustrated £25

A Study of Asides and Related Conventions in Greek Drama

David Bain

The aside is a familiar device in European drama. After arguing that it originated in Greek tragedy, Dr. Bain examines its occurrences in New Comedy and particularly in the works of Menander, making full use of recent discoveries of comic papyri. £9.75 Oxford Classical and Philosophical Monographs

Form and Colour in Greek Painting

VINCENT J. BRUNO

During the fifth century BC, a few Greek artists drastically altered man's approach to painting by inventing perspective and colour-shading. This new technique opened up painting so that the old two-dimensional plane was shattered, and human figures were for the first time rendered as moving in space. Professor Bruno has examined the evidence in ancient literature for masterpieces of Greek painting—none of the most important works survives—and has studied important examples excavated in recent years. A painter himself, he has made watercolour copies of many details of these paintings, which are reproduced here. His conclusions bear on several important problems in classical art history, principally: How accurate a reflection of Greek styles is the Renaissance and modern interpretation of classical form as characterized by restraint in chiaroscuro and the use of colour to suggest a third dimension?

Aristocracy in Greek Society

M. T. W. ARNHEIM

The form of government most commonly associated with the ancient Greeks in the modern mind is democracy. So it may be unexpected that a scholar has produced a long study of Greek aristocracy. What Professor Arnheim demonstrates is that aristocracy is central to a true understanding of Greek history—not only politically but, even more important, in a social and conceptual sense. Without a grasp of aristocratic patterns of thought one cannot hope to understand any type of Greek society, including Athenian democracy. Greek society from Mycenaean times to the Age of Alexander the Great is examined, and such questions are asked as: What bearing does the aristocratic society of the Homeric epics have upon history? Why did so many aristocratic governments succumb to tyranny in the sixth and seventh centuries BC? Was Greek political thought really egalitarian at any time—or was it always basically aristocratic? In the answers to these questions a completely new interpretation of Greek history and society emerges.

Birds in Greek Life and Myth

JOHN POLLARD

Birds coloured almost every aspect of ancient Greek life, and yet no book has been devoted exclusively to the subject since Sir D'Arcy Wentworth Thompson's scholarly glossary, first published in 1895. John Pollard, an experienced naturalist as well as a classical scholar, surveys all the species mentioned by the ancient authorities in the light of contemporary ornithological knowledge, and deals with the place of birds in ancient life and myth. Mr Pollard illustrates his theme with an engaging collection of photographs, both spectacular (cock-fighting on a cup of c.400 BC) and amusing (the depiction of a girl with a pet bird, c.420–390 BC). His comprehensive account ranges from bird-trapping and hawking to the pseudo-science of augury and the use of birds as love-charms, from the role of birds in religion or myth as the familiars of the gods to their place in folklore or fable in the form of such monsters as the Siren and the Harpy.

Cybele and Attis

The Myth and the Cult

MAARTEN J. VERMASEREN

Translated by A. M. H. Lemmers

In the civilizations of Asia Minor, Crete and the early Greek mainland the earth was worshipped as a goddess appearing everywhere as Great Mother: the Greek Aphrodite, Artemis, Persephone or Demeter, the Egyptian Isis, and Cybele whose cult originated in Phrygia. In mythology and then in cult she was associated with a young shepherd called Attis whose own cult became recognized under the Roman Empire. In this major book on the subject for sixty years, the author describes in detail the oriental religion with its Dionysiac aspects and eunuch priests. He shows how it developed and changed in its spread from East to West, coming to Rome during the Second Punic War. Yearly feasts were instituted and various associated rituals became particularly popular during the pagan revival at the end of the fourth century AD, by which time Attis was regarded as a solar god and Cybele as a cosmic power.

SLIDES COLLECTION

The Slides Collection contains over 4,300 coloured slides (2" × 2") covering a wide variety of subjects, including sites on the Greek mainland, the Greek islands, Rome, Italy and the Roman Empire, Etruscan tomb paintings, Roman frescoes and mosaics and Greek vases: objects from the Greek and Roman Life Room of the British Museum are well represented.

Sets and film-strips are available to members, and the Keeper of Slides will be pleased to send a list of these on request.

There are 23 coloured sets (2" × 2"), of which 13 are available as filmstrips. There are also 4 black and white sets (2" × 2") and 7 black and white film-strips which will be phased out gradually and reproduced in colour. All may be bought or hired by members: notes to the sets are included in the hire price of 80p per set, plus postage, or for purchase at the price stated on the list. Several new sets are projected.

A new catalogue of coloured slides is available for purchase or hire. There are 10,000 B/W (3¼" × 3¼") slides from which prints or 2" × 2" slides may be made.

For particulars apply to the Secretary of either Society at 31-34 Gordon Square, London, WC1H 0PP.
