Marta Traba

Distinguished—and outspoken—art critic Marta Traba offers penetrating new insights into the work of Latin America's most significant twentieth-century artists. In her first work to be translated into English, she demonstrates that the most conspicuous characteristic of Latin American art is its unvarying aim of using visual images to communicate, not with an artistic elite, but with the public. The book is richly illustrated with more than one hundred full-color reproductions of works by Diego Rivera, Rufino Tamayo, Fernando Botero, Frida Kahlo, Wifredo Lam, and others.

capitalists and revolution in nicaragua

opposition and accommodation
1979–1993

Rose J. Spalding

“This excellent study sets the Nicaraguan case in comparative perspective and makes a very significant contribution to our understanding of the crucial relationship between regimes that pursue serious structural change and the bourgeoisie. It will be of interest to all those studying the political economy of development and reform.”—Evelyne Huber, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

“Spalding’s detailed accounting of the development and evolution of Nicaragua’s capitalist class makes a major contribution to the study of the Nicaraguan revolution and its aftermath. This is essential reading for anyone who seeks to understand Nicaraguan politics.”

—John A. Booth, University of North Texas

approx. 340 pp., $49.95 cloth, $19.95 paper

“A work of exceptional quality. It is the first serious work to provide a comprehensive study of coffee production in Central America and relate it to the social and political development of the region. It explains the complex relationships between the political, social, and economic structures of modern Central America better than any other work I know of.”—Ralph Lee

Woodward, Jr., Tulane University

“The strength of this work lies in its ability to show the variability of social, labor, and land tenure patterns with coffee, not just between but within each of the Central American nations. . . . A highly effective presentation of what we currently know about coffee, society, and politics in Central America.”—Lowell Gudmundson,

BACK FROM THE FUTURE

Cuba under Castro
Susan Eva Eckstein

ORPHEUS AND POWER

The Movimento Negro of
Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, Brazil
1945-1988

Michael George Hanchard

As Susan Eckstein reveals, not only has Castro's Cuba been less ideologically driven by Marxist-Leninist orthodoxy than has heretofore been believed, it also has been less omnipotent. Drawing on interviews, personal observations, and primary sources, this book demonstrates the need for a revisionist view of Cuba.

"A rich analysis of the Cuban revolution. . . . more balanced, integrated, and penetrating than many previous texts. . . . Eckstein delivers a comprehensive and insightful interpretation of Castro's Cuba."—Andrew Zimbalist, co-author of The Cuban Economy

"Susan Eckstein's solid research provides unique insight not only into the dynamics that propelled the Cuban revolution but also into the dramatic changes now occurring in Cuba."—Saul Landau, author of The Guerilla Wars of Central America

Cloth: $29.95 ISBN 0-691-03445-1

From recent data on disparities between Brazilian whites and non-whites in areas of health, education, and welfare, it is clear that vast racial inequalities do exist in Brazil, contrary to earlier assertions in race relations scholarship that the country is a "racial democracy." Here Michael George Hanchard explores the implications of this increasingly evident racial inequality, highlighting Afro-Brazilian attempts at mobilizing for civil rights.

"This book will be well received both because of the timeliness of the topic and the novel way in which it is treated. Virtually nothing exists in English that deals carefully with first-hand, participant accounts as this work does. It is also an intriguing development of Gramscian theory as applied to racial/ethnic identity, organization, and conflict."
