ART IN NORTH-EAST NEW GUINEA

by

TIBOR BODROGI

Director of the Ethnographical
Museum

Budapest

In English. 228 pages, with 8 coloured plates and 232 illustrations. Cloth. £3 10s.

Tibor Bodrogi, director of the Ethnographical Museum, Budapest, whose works are widely known to both scientists and general public interested in primitive art, surveys here the art of North-East New Guinea. The social and religious life and material culture of the region are first considered, after which the author examines in detail the techniques and materials of a wide variety of objects and classifies their motifs.

The reader is able to follow the author's analysis of the origins and development of the meaning of these motifs by means of numerous photographs and drawings throughout the text, which afford a comprehensive picture of a fascinating branch of primitive art.
