Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Dan Blim received his Ph.D. in musicology from the University of Michigan in 2013 with a dissertation titled “Patchwork Nation: Collage, Music, and American Identity.” He is currently a visiting adjunct professor at Drew University.

Lucy E. Carroll is organist and music director at the Carmelite Monastery of Philadelphia. She has served on the faculties of Combs College of Music and Westminster Choir College and was K–12 Music Coordinator for the Centennial Schools. As a Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission Scholar in Residence, she transcribes original eighteenth-century manuscripts for the Ephrata Cloister Chorus and presents talks and workshops at the historic site.

Kimberly Francis is Assistant Professor of Music History at the University of Guelph, Canada where she specializes in the life and work of Nadia Boulanger. Her current project is funded by a two-year research grant from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. She is currently completing a monograph on Boulanger’s relationship with Igor Stravinsky as well as an edition of their correspondence.

Jessica L. Getman is pursuing a Ph.D. in musicology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Her dissertation considers music and social ideology in the original 1960s Star Trek television series. She has publicly presented research on this topic, as well as on popular music in eighteenth-century France, on the folk music of the twentieth- and twenty-first-century science fiction fan community, and on the use of popular music in science fiction.

Christina Gier is Assistant Professor of Musicology at the University of Alberta, and holds a Ph.D. in Musicology from Duke University. Her research examines twentieth-century musical styles through the lens of identity and subjectivity. Her publications appear in the Journal of Musicological Research, Music and Politics, and Musica Humana. She has an essay on Sunset Boulevard (1950) in the collection Anxiety Muted, forthcoming from Oxford University Press.

Jonathan Goldman is Associate Professor of Musicology in the Faculty of Music of the Université de Montréal. From 2007 to 2013, he was Assistant Professor in the School of Music of the University of Victoria. He is Editor-in-Chief of the journal Circuit, musiques contemporaines. His book, The Musical Language of Pierre Boulez: Writings and Compositions was published by Cambridge University Press in 2011.

John Graziano is Director of Music in Gotham, a database of musical events in New York City, 1862–75, and a National Endowment for the Humanities–funded project. He is Professor Emeritus at the City College and Graduate Center, City University of New York, and is Series Editor for A-R Editions' Recent Researches in American Music and for the Pendragon Press series, American Music and Musicians.

Larry Hamberlin is Associate Professor of Music at Middlebury College. He is the author of An Introduction to America's Music, with Richard Crawford (2nd. ed., 2013); and Tin Pan Opera: Operatic Novelties in the Ragtime Era (2011). His articles on American popular song have appeared in the Journal of the American Musicological Society and American Music. Hamberlin's paper on portraits of Italian Americans in operatic novelty song was awarded the 2004 Mark Tucker Prize of the Society for American Music.

Rob Haskins is Associate Professor of Music at the University of New Hampshire, where he teaches courses in music history. His most recent book is John Cage (2012). He also performs and records, and served as musical director for the newly commissioned production of Cage's Song Books, performed by Alarm Will Sound at the Holland Festival. He has written for American Record Guide since 1993.

Panayotis (Paddy) League is a Ph.D. candidate in ethnomusicology at Harvard University. His current research focuses on the diatonic button accordion at rural festivals in Northeastern Brazil. He has published articles in Classics@, the online journal of Harvard's Center for Hellenic Studies; the online Portfolio of the Department of Musicology and Ethnomusicology at Boston University; and Forum Folkloristica. He is an active performer of Irish, Greek, and Brazilian music on the fiddle, accordion, and various lutes.

Kevin E. Mooney is Assistant Professor of Musicology at Texas State University in San Marcos. A specialist in Texas music, he has contributed articles to the Handbook of Texas Music and South Central Music Bulletin, among other publications. His current research focuses on jazz history with a particular emphasis on the music and career of vocalist Louise Tobin (b. 1918). He is also a contributor to the second edition of The Grove Dictionary of American Music.

Howard Pollack is John and Rebecca Moores Professor of Music at the University of Houston. His most recent books are George Gershwin: His Life and Work (2006) and Marc Blitzstein: His Life, His Work, His World (2012).

Colleen Renihan is Assistant Professor of Music at Mount Allison University in New Brunswick, Canada. She received a Ph.D. in musicology from the University of Toronto in 2011 with a dissertation that examined Canadian opera as historical narrative. Her current research examines contemporary opera from a perspective based in the philosophy of history.

Kelly St. Pierre holds a Ph.D. in musicology from Case Western Reserve University. Her research on Bedřich Smetana explores how early scholarship on the Czech composer generated political myths, and how these myths were adapted in the twentieth century to suit communist ideologies. She currently works as a SAGES Fellow at Case Western and as a part-time faculty member at Youngstown State University.

Anna Stephan-Robinson is Assistant Professor of Music at West Liberty University, where she teaches music theory, ear training, and applied horn. She received her Ph.D. in music theory from the Eastman School of Music, and holds degrees in horn performance and music education. Her research interests include popular music analysis, American art music of the early twentieth century, and applications of technology to music theory pedagogy.

Matthew Thomas earned the Ph.D. in historical musicology from the University of Southern California in 2011. He teaches music history at California State University, Fullerton; California State University, Northridge; and Pasadena City College. He is a regular contributor of program notes for the Salzburg Mozart festival and has written articles for the second edition of The Grove Dictionary of American Music. He is the tenor soloist at La Canada Presbyterian Church and is a member of the Los Angeles Master Chorale.
