

MIKROKOSMOS

Progressive Piano Pieces by Béla Bartók

A collection of 153 graded piano pieces, beginning with the easiest unison melodies in the range of five fingers up to the most advanced grades. This is not a "Piano Method" in the traditional sense. It is a course for reading, playing and understanding modern music. No similar work has been written since the days of the great masters, and never has the need for such a work been more generally and urgently felt.

"These pieces are an education of the mind as well as on the hands on the keyboard... a truly liberal education."—The Times, London

"Bartók trains the eye to read complex chords and the ear to accept them without protest of any dissonance."—The Daily Telegraph

"Bartók, by force of his genius, creates something absolutely fresh."—The Observer

"'Mikrokosmos' should certainly be in the hands of all students, young and old; they can learn a great deal from it."—The Sunday Times

"Easily the most exciting work was Bartók's Sonata for two pianos and percussion for the new sonorities disclosed by unsuspected tonal affinities between pianos, and timpani and xylophone stimulated a first-class mind into thinking in a new way—the novel medium actually provoked originality of thought." The Times.
