LALLĀ-VAKYĀNI

OR

The Wise Sayings of Lal Dēd

a mystic poetess of Ancient Kashmir.

Edited with Translation, Notes, and a Vocabulary

BY

Sir GEORGE GRIERSON, K. C. I. E., Ph. D., D. Litt., M. R. A. S.

AND

LIONEL D. BARNETT, Litt. D., M. R. A. S.

The collection of songs edited in the present volume possesses a two-fold interest. Composed so long ago as the fourteenth century A. D., it claims the attention not only of the philologist as the oldest known specimen of the Kāshmirī language, but also, and still more, that of the student of religions.

In ancient times the religious system based on Śaiva Yōga was the object of much study amongst the learned men of Kashmir. Lallā, or Lal Dēd, the authoress of the following verses, was a wandering ascetic and a devoted follower of this cult. The importance of her songs consists in the fact that they are not a systematic exposé of Śaivism on the lines laid down by the theologians who preceded her, but illustrate the religion on its popular side. What we have here is not a mere book-religion as evolved in the minds of great thinkers and idealists, but a picture of the actual hopes and fears of the common folk that nominally followed the teaching of these wise men whom they had accepted as their guides. The book, in short, gives an account, often in vivid and picturesque language, of the actual working out in practice of a religion previously worked out in theory. As such it is a unique contribution to the body of evidence that must necessarily form the basis of a future history of one of the most important religious systems of India.
