THE ORIGIN OF I CORINTHIANS

John C. Hurd, Jr.

50s. net

Published in the U.S.A. by the Seabury Press

Dr Hurd challenges traditional conceptions of the state of affairs in the Corinthian Church which prompted the writing of the epistle, and he has new light to throw on Paul's preaching and its development with the maturing of his own thought and with his experience of the effect of his preaching on the communities he evangelized. This is a book which no student or teacher of the New Testament will be able to ignore. Though based on accepted methods of exegesis and taking fully into account the findings of all important workers in this field, it opens up new ideas on Pauline studies and indeed on New Testament studies as a whole.

THE BIBLICAL EXEGESIS OF JUSTIN MARTYR

Willis A. Shotwell

19s. 6d. net

Dr Shotwell, Professor of New Testament Studies at Berkeley Baptist Divinity School, examines in great detail Justin Martyr's method of biblical exegesis and finds that it has more in common with that of the Rabbis and the Qumran material than with that of Philo and the Greek allegorists, and that, contrary to accepted opinion, Justin did not rely to any great extent on Philo.

THE JUST WAR IN AQUINAS AND GROTIUS

Joan Tooke

63s. net

Dr Tooke shows how Aquinas' doctrine of the just war, though basically a restatement of Augustine's, is conditioned by ideas of natural law which derive from Aristotelian rather than Christian origins. A study of Aquinas' rational proof of the divinity of the Eternal Law, of which natural law was for him a part, shows up difficulties which affect the religious basis of his teaching on natural law. Grotius comes into the picture as the first great international lawyer, who laid the foundations of a system aimed at the prevention, or at least control of inter-state war. But the question of moral issues remains. Dr Tooke's dispassionate study helps to clear the ground for a reassessment.
