Oriental and African Studies.*

No-one who is studying for the optional African Law part of the Bar examinations should be without this work; it will, however, also find a wide market among people concerned with the practical administration of Law in Africa as well as others who may be interested in it purely as a book of reference. Running to some 220 pages, this book will contain—amongst other material—a number of invaluable diagrams.

Every case likely to be of interest and value to lawyers is reported. The E.A.L.R. are issued quarterly and the four issues for the year make up a complete volume.
