Two Hungry Giants

The United States and Japan in the Quest for Oil and Ores

Raymond Vernon

Vernon explores the relationship between the United States and Japan in their competition for industrial raw materials. In this comparative analysis of policies and approaches, Vernon suggests what is likely to occur in the future as two economic superpowers search the world for raw materials.

Millenarianism and Peasant Politics in Vietnam

Hue-Tam Ho Tai

Millenarianism, the belief in a coming ideal society, offered hope and promise to nineteenth-century Vietnamese peasants. Transcending the conventional tendency to view millenarian movements merely as forms of protest, the author recreates the moral and religious universe of its followers and traces its impact on Vietnamese society.

In Search of Wealth and Power

Yen Fu and the West

Benjamin Schwartz

This account of Yen Fu, the first Chinese literatus to apply himself to modern Western thought, studies his effect on the Chinese intelligentsia of the late nineteenth century, as he worked to discover the secret of the West's success through the translation of its political philosophers.

JAPAN AND CHINA REVISITED

JAPAN: The Story of a Nation Third Edition

EDWIN O. REISCHAUER, Harvard University

In this new edition, almost completely rewritten from earlier versions, Edwin O. Reischauer—former U.S. Ambassador to Japan and now one of this country's leading authorities on Japan—has brought up to date his renowned study of Japanese history, culture, and politics.

The author delineates the evolution of Japanese civilization from imperial rule through the post-war recovery of the Japanese economy. Reischauer analyzes the current challenges faced by the Japanese as a major industrial power.

Alfred A. Knopf, Inc./November 1980/402 pages paperbound/Order Code: 32412

CHINA'S STRUGGLE TO MODERNIZE Second Edition

MICHAEL GASSTER, Rutgers University

This comprehensive introduction to 20th century China emphasizes the interaction between China and the West, focusing on China's attempt to become modern and yet to retain its cultural identity. Brief enough so that students can easily cover other material, the text is an excellent supplement for Asian studies courses.

New material brings the coverage of the book up through 1981. Substantial revisions have been made in material covering the years 1960–1971.

Noted among China scholars, Professor Gasster has traveled extensively in China since 1976.

This Kind of Woman

TEN STORIES BY JAPANESE WOMEN WRITERS, 1960–1976

Translated and Edited by Yukiko Tanaka & Elizabeth Hanson. The short stories in this collection introduce the English-reading public to the contemporary fiction of some of Japan's leading female writers. Chosen for their high literary quality and for their sensitivity to the changes that have so dramatically altered the lives of women in postwar Japan, the stories concern single mothers, women in conventional marriages who are questioning their roles as wives and mothers, and young women who are striving to understand more completely their relationship to men, to other women their age, and to their mothers. $18.75

The Changelings

A CLASSICAL JAPANESE COURT TALE

Translated, with an Introduction and Notes, by Rosette F. Willig. This is the first English translation of Torikaebaya monogatari, a 12th-century work that tells the story of a brother and sister whose natural inclinations lead them at an early age to live as members of the opposite sex. The chronicle of their difficulties, especially the complications that arise in the course of their sexual encounters, ends with the hero and heroine taking each other's place in society, thus returning to their original sexes. It is clearly among the best of the few surviving examples of giko monogatari, a literary genre marked by a simple structure, a limited number of characters, an unusual problem as the basis of its plot, and elements imitative of the classic The Tale of Genji. $19.50

Ancestor Worship and Korean Society

Roger L. Janelli & Dawnhee Yim Janelli. This first comprehensive study of Korean ancestor worship shows how Korean rites for the dead and beliefs about the afterlife interconnect with Korean family, kinship-group, and class organization. Challenging the view that Korean ancestor worship is primarily an expression of Confucian ideology, the authors show that the selection of those who receive ancestor rites, the identities of the ritual participants, and many ritual practices are more readily attributable to the unusual strength of agnation in Korean society. The analysis is richly illustrated with material from the Korean lineage village of Twisongdwi, and is supplemented by published studies of several other Korean communities. Illus. $25.00

Now a Stanford Paperback

Three Ways of Thought in Ancient China

Arthur Waley. A classic in the literature of Chinese philosophy, this book provides a lucid examination of the conflicting Taoist, Confucianist, and "Realist" schools of thought that flourished in China during the fourth century B.C. Paper, $5.95

Education and Social Change in China

The Beginnings of the Modern Era

by Sally Borthwick

Dr. Borthwick addresses the problems experienced by educational reformers in late Qing China between 1890 and 1911 when they attempted to implement Western-style educational practices while at the same time trying to preserve traditional cultural values. The second publication in Hoover Institution Press's new Education and Society Series, EDUCATION AND SOCIAL CHANGE IN CHINA presents not only a fascinating portrait of this era in Chinese educational reform but also embodies profound implications for China's modernization efforts today.

Lin Biao and the Gang of Four

Contra-Confucianism in Historical and Intellectual Perspective

By TIEN-WEI WU. This is the first book to treat the intellectual developments that accompanied the "Criticizing Lin Biao and Confucius Movement" and the campaign against the "Gang of Four," separating the political issues from the academic issues and reporting the genuine advances arising from both campaigns in archaeology, history, philosophy, sociology, and literature.

The Origins of Chinese Civilization

Edited by David N. Keightley

The contributors to this volume provide original and significant interpretations of the nature of Chinese civilization in its formative stage. Their essays will appeal to all who are interested in the genesis of civilization and in the transition from the Neolithic to the Bronze Age; they summarize the state of present knowledge about China and suggest research strategies and hypotheses for the future. $45.00 cloth; $15.00 paperback, illustrated

Tribes of India

The Struggle for Survival

by Christoph von Fürer-Haimendorf

This study of economic and social change deals not only with the plight of tribes crushed by the forces of modernization, but also with instances of beneficial development in areas of Northeast India where tribal groups are in a majority and able to hold their own. "A book for people, not just about them. Its findings are very important, with explosive implications."—James M. Freeman "No one else could have written this book. The author's experience, the wide range of his research in India, and the time-span make the volume unique."—Gerald D. Berreman $29.95, illustrated

Communism in Kerala

by T. J. Nossiter

In a framework of political history from the Freedom Struggle to the present, Nossiter examines communists' aims and record in government; their attitudes toward parliamentary processes; national-state relations; and communism's electoral base and future prospects. He stresses the regional character of Kerala's communism and its synthesis of tradition, theory, and expedience. $35.00

Religion and Nothingness

Keiji Nishitani

Translated with an Introduction by Jan Van Bragt, Foreword by Winston L. King

The leading representative of the Kyoto School of Philosophy lays the foundations of thought for a world in the making, for a world united beyond the differences of East and West. Nishitani notes the irreversible trend of Western civilization to nihilism, and singles out the conquest of nihilism as the task for contemporary philosophy. $28.50

Women, Marriage, and Ritual in a Bengali Society

Lina M. Fruzzetti

The author focuses on the separate domain of women, particularly their marriage rituals, as a means of understanding Indian society as a whole. She describes the actual rituals in detail, stressing that they are a reality for the women, not merely an idiom for expressing reality.

"Makes a complex system of caste and kinship intelligible without being a dull kinship study... a considerable contribution to the scholarly development of Indian Studies in general."—James J. Fox

Contemporary Trade Strategies in the Philippines

A Study in Marketing Anthropology

Norbert Dannhaeuser

This pathbreaking work defines and develops a new subfield of anthropology—marketing anthropology. Dannhaeuser studies changes in the distribution of consumer goods between Manila and Dagupan, a town of 95,000 in a much less developed part of the Philippines, arguing that Manila's large scale commerce has benefited regional industry, entrepreneurship, and the standard of living. The book combines detail of interest to anthropologists with aggregate data of interest to economists. 288 pages. $30.00

Japan and Western Europe

Conflict and Cooperation

edited by Loukas Tsoukalis and Maureen White

Probing the popular media's simplistic and often sensationalist presentations of the problems between Europe and Japan, this volume draws on the experiences of policy makers as well as academic analysts to present a lucid and well-rounded account of the issues.

Fires of Love/Waters of Peace

by Lee Siegel, Associate Professor of Religion, University of Hawaii

An exploration of the relationship between sensuality and spirituality in India, guided by the Sanskrit poetry of two antithetical figures—Amaru, the court poet of erotic verses, and Śāṅkara, the teacher of holy truths.

“Dr. Siegel makes these timeless emotions vivid to our imaginations. His treatment of the Sanskrit poetry is both bold and sensitive. A delight to read.”
—Richard Gombrich, Boden Professor of Sanskrit, Oxford University

“What makes this a wonderful book is the grace with which it combines meticulous scholarship and creative playfulness. It is a delightful amalgam of philosophy, narrative, and poetry. All of the translations are accurate and readable, and many of them take off from that rare moment of serendipity when the muse presents the translator with an English rhyme or trope that lifts the translation from the realm of scholarship to the realm of art. The book is a sheer joy to read and will delight the lay reader as much as the Indologist.” —Wendy O’Flaherty, University of Chicago

The States of South Asia: Problems of National Integration

edited by A. Jeyaratnam Wilson, Professor of Political Science, University of New Brunswick, and Dennis Dalton, Professor of Political Science, Barnard College

This is the most comprehensive and up-to-date book available on South Asian politics, with contributions from sixteen scholars spread over four continents. The first section looks at the sub-continent as a whole while examining the scenario of the individual states—Pakistan, India, Sri Lanka—at the time of their independence. Then the causes of national breakdown are investigated. The final section looks into the future while indicating weaknesses in the political systems of the new states and explaining how and why some of their explosive political problems are being dealt with in particular ways.
