

Arthur B. Thompson, Jr., and Robert J. Sickels have been appointed instructors in political science at The University of Vermont.

James F. Tierney, formerly assistant professor at Dartmouth College and Ford Foundation Fellow in International Relations, 1957-1958, joined the staff of Hunter College in September 1958.

Jan F. Triska has joined the department of government at Cornell University as an assistant professor.

Robert Tucker, formerly of the RAND Corporation has been appointed associate professor of government at Indiana University.

S. Sidney Ulmer was promoted to assistant professor of political science at Michigan State University.

Amry Vandenbosch has been appointed director of the newly created William Andrew Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce at the University of Kentucky. The school is established in accordance with the terms of the will of James Kennedy Patterson who was president of the University from 1869 to 1910 and who left his estate to the University for this purpose as a memorial to his son. Earnest G. Trimbe succeeds Vandenbosch as head of the department of political science.

Manfred C. Vernon has been promoted to professor at the University of Alabama.

Clement E. Vose, formerly of Bowdoin, has become associate professor of government at Wesleyan. At present he is doing research as a senior fellow in the Yale Law School under a Rockefeller grant.

F. Champion Ward, former dean of the College at the University of Chicago has become director of the Overseas Development Program for the Near East and Africa of the Ford Foundation.

Ruth G. Weintraub, chairman of the political science Department at Hunter College, has been appointed director of graduate studies in the Arts and Sciences at that institution.

Lloyd M. Wells, formerly of Southern Methodist University, has been appointed associate professor of political science at the University of Missouri.

John Westburg, who recently received his Ph.D. from the University of Southern California, has been appointed associate professor of history and government at Pan American College.

William R. Willoughby has been promoted from associate professor to full professor at St. Lawrence University.

Daniel Wit, visiting associate professor of government, has joined the faculty of Indiana University for one year after completing two years at the institute of public administration at Thammasat University in Bangkok, Thailand.

Alfred C. Wolf has been named director of the Overseas Development Program of the Ford Foundation in Latin America and the Caribbean.

John W. Wortman has been appointed to the overseas program of the University of Maryland.

Deil Wright has been promoted to assistant professor at Wayne State University.

Frederick L. Zimmermann, director of research of the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Interstate Cooperation and associate professor of political science at Hunter College, has been promoted to the rank of full professor at the latter institution.

IN MEMORIAM

After an illness of several months, NORMAN DWIGHT HARRIS died on September 4, 1958, in his home in Daytona Beach, Florida. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on January 25, 1870, graduated in 1892 from the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University, and after studying a year in the University of Chicago, spent three years at the Universities of Berlin and Leipzig. In 1901, he received his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago. For the next four years, he was instructor in history in Lawrence College, Appleton, Wisconsin. In 1906 he was appointed Professor of European Diplomatic History in Northwestern University. Ten years later he organized the department of political science there and remained its chairman until his retirement in 1928.

Norman Dwight Harris had been one of the first of the young scholars to join the American Political Science Association immediately upon its establishment in 1906. In the next few years he contributed leading articles to this REVIEW and to the Proceedings of the Association, as well as numerous book reviews. In 1913-1916 he served as a member of the Executive Council of the Association.

Professor Harris' first published treatise appeared in 1904 under the title of The History of Negro Servitude in Illinois. His Intervention and Colonization in Africa was published in 1914, and a revised edition in 1927, while his Europe and Asia appeared in 1925. The two latter books introduced a new and realistic method of study of imperialism and colonialism, based on personal observation and investigation of the areas under scrutiny as well as upon complete parliamentary documentation, and were widely used as textbooks. In 1917-1918 Professor Harris served as a member of Colonel House's committee for gathering data for the Paris Peace Conference of 1919. In this period he also contributed numerous articles and reviews to the American Journal of International Law.

As a student, and later as a teacher, he travelled extensively in Europe (including Russia), in Africa and in Asia. During these travels he collected a large library of books and documents in the field of diplomatic history and European colonization, which he presented to Deering Library of Northwestern University.

He persuaded his father, Norman Waite Harris, founder of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago, to build Harris Hall on the campus of Northwestern University. Completed in 1914, the Hall has ever since housed the departments of political science and history. Professor Harris also guided, for a number of years, the selection of distinguished scholars, foreign as well as American, who delivered a notable series of lectures under the auspices of the Norman Waite Harris Fund.

After his retirement from teaching he spent most of his time in France, where he served as a trustee of the American Library in Paris, until the outbreak of the Second World War. Throughout his life, he continued his assistance to Oriental students, providing scholarships for young scholars from both China and Japan.

KENNETH COLEGROVE