The Safest Local Anæsthetic for Tonsillectomy

LOCAL ANÆSTHESIA FOR TONSILLECTOMY

"I have performed tonsillectomy under novocain anesthesia in selected cases for twelve years. . . . On more than one occasion I have chosen two cases as similar as possible for comparison, and subjected them to operation one after the other on the same day, one under local and the other under general anesthesia. On each occasion the comparison, both subjectively and objectively, has been so strikingly in favour of the local anæsthetic that I have wondered why this method is not more generally used in this country."—Extract from B.M.J., 18th June 1932, page 1147.

High praise for Dr. Beatty's new book

HEARING IN MAN AND ANIMALS

by DR R. T. BEATTY

M.A., B.E., D.Sc.

"Many students . . . must have felt the need of some comprehensive and intelligible account of the present position of the theory of hearing. . . . It may be doubted whether it would be possible for the work to have been better done within the modest compass of which it [Dr. Beatty's book] is made up. . . . The book is so good, and the need for such a work is so obvious, that it can scarcely fail to be in great demand."—

Journal of Laryngology and Otology.

"It is remarkably good scientific reading." Manchester Guardian.
