Hitler's First Foreign Minister

Constantin Freiherr von Neurath

by John L. Heineman

Germany's foreign policy in the early years of the Third Reich was not shaped by Adolf Hitler and his Nazi cohorts but by the foreign minister, Constantin Freiherr von Neurath. This biography of Neurath traces the basis of his positions, his relationship with Hitler, his role in shaping the aggressive and vigorous decisions from 1933 to 1936, and his influence on the long-term goals of German foreign policy.
