

DREAM WORLDS

Mass Consumption in Late Nineteenth Century France
by Rosalind Williams

A fascinating examination of the origins and moral implications of consumer society. As a cultural history, it traces the emergence in late nineteenth-century France of a system of consumer lifestyles—the dream worlds of the modern consumer. As a critical appraisal, the book draws upon the ideas of a group of creative French thinkers from the same period.

The Challenge of Change The Sun Oil Company, 1945–1977

By Arthur M. Johnson. An examination, from the perspective of top management, of the challenges posed a major American oil company since World War II that focusses on the responses made by a corporate management that has had to cope, on the one hand, with wide swings in the availability of its basic natural resource and radically altered conditions in the international energy market, and, on the other, with policies of the federal government that increasingly affected the conditions, extent, and costs of changes management had to make in its operational, financial, and entrepreneurial strategies. $30.00

The Merchant Builders

by Ned Eichler

Ned Eichler writes succinctly about the tract or homebuilding industry which he knows inside out. His book offers the first full-scale account of the merchant builders—Levitt, U.S. Homes, Fox and Jacobs, and Eichler Homes prominently among them—who gave a major impetus to the postwar building boom in America and to the American dream of homeownership as an attainable goal for the average family.

After leaving the family firm, Eichler Homes, Inc., Eichler became vice president of the new town of Reston, Virginia, was executive vice president of the Klingbeil Company (builder of garden apartments), was the partner in charge of the disposition of more than a billion dollars of Penn Central properties undertaken by Victor Palmieri and Co., and served as the federal court's trustee president of Levitt & Sons. He is currently visiting professor of business administration at the University of California, Berkeley.

“Ned Eichler's perspective on the homebuilding industry is a truly unique one combining as it does his experience as both a practitioner and academician.”—Thomas J. Flynn, Senior Vice President, Bank of America

Thomas Newcomen Book Award in Business History

The Newcomen Society in North America, in cooperation with the Business History Review, will award in 1982 the seventh in a series of triennial prizes consisting of $1000 and a scroll for the best book on the history of business published in the United States during the years 1979-1981. "Business history" is defined in its broadest sense to include not only the history of firms or industries, but books tracing interactions of businessmen, analyses of business philosophy or behavior, and studies of the adjustment of businesses and businessmen to their economic, political, and social environments. Criteria for selection will include contribution to knowledge, depth of analysis, soundness of reasoning, clarity of style and organization, and general readability and format.

Judges for the 1982 award are Dr. Albro Martin, Oglesby Professor of the American Heritage, Bradley University; Dr. Alfred D. Chandler, Jr., Straus Professor of Business History, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration; and Mr. Stanley van den Heuvel, The Newcomen Society in North America.
