Mao Tse-tung in Opposition 1927-1935

John E. Rue. This is a new examination and interpretation of that most critical period in Mao's career when he worked out the essential elements of his revolutionary strategy—elements which have become the hard core of the policies and pronouncements emanating from Peking today. Included in the book are the first English translations of several important documents by Mao. Hoover Institution Publications.

Student Nationalism in China 1927-1937

John Israel. In 1927 the Kuomintang faced the problem of retaining the loyalty—and services—of China's educated elite, the largest single component of which was the university and middle school students. How and why the government failed to come to terms with this problem, thus paving the way for ever-increasing Communist influence in student ranks, is the theme of this book. Hoover Institution Publications.

Tales from the Orient . . .

These two books from the Folktales of the World series offer expert documentation, including comparative notes and Aarne-Thompson tale-type numbers. In each case the chosen tale is selected as best-told and most representative.

FOLKTALES OF CHINA

Edited by WOLFRAM EBERHARD

These stories of city gods and magicians, thieves and beggars, serpents and tigers, treacherous ministers and dutiful sons reveal facets of Chinese life and culture in an ever-changing panorama of rural and urban folk tradition.

No Western scholar has done more than Wolfram Eberhard to interest the world in Chinese folktales. Now he has added extensive notes and indexes to these selections from his Chinese Fairy Tales and Folk Tales (1937). In addition, this book includes newly translated tales from Communist China which illustrate the propagandistic uses of the folktale.

267 pages, $5.50

FOLKTALES OF JAPAN

Edited by KEIGO SEKI

Translated by ROBERT J. ADAMS

These word-of-mouth tales are here translated into English in a representative sampling for the first time. Some are known in over a hundred current versions, some can be traced to classical examples. They all reflect the widespread and deep-rooted beliefs and traditions of the Japanese people.

Keigo Seki is on the faculty of Gakugei University, Tokyo. He is the leading folktale scholar of Japan and has compiled the standard classification of Japanese tales, Nihon Mukashi-banashi Shusei, based on the many field collections made in the twentieth century.

RELIGION IN JAPANESE HISTORY

JOSEPH M. KITAGAWA

"Dr. Kitagawa gives a comprehensive and scholarly historical study of the religious development in Japan from its obscure beginning (about the 3rd century) to modern times. This book is a critical analysis of the forces and motivations underlying the persuasiveness of religion in Japanese life. The last chapter contains materials on the new religion in Japan which has been a somewhat confused picture even to the Japanese themselves. Dr. Kitagawa gives his insight into how new religion and old religion work to mold the future of Japan."—Library Journal

DICTIONARY OF SELECTED FORMS IN CLASSICAL JAPANESE LITERATURE

IVAN MORRIS

A unique aid for the student of classical Japanese literature. The dictionary lists most of the forms found in major Japanese texts beginning with the Kojiki (712) and continuing to the Tsurezuregusa (c. 1330). Appendices contain the formation of type verbs and adjectives, the conjugation of forms included in the Dictionary, a selection of forms classified according to grammatical function, and a list of honorific, polite, and humble auxiliary verbs.

BURMESE MONK'S TALES

COLLECTED, TRANSLATED AND INTRODUCED

BY MAUNG HTIN AUNG

"This collection of more than 60 short tales, filled with humor and humanity, were collected partly from Burmese anthologies and partly from native retellings. . . . A prologue to each sets the situational stage for the telling and for the lesson it contains. There is a fine introductory description of Burmese Buddhist monastic life at the time these tales were composed—the 1870's and 80's—and appendices of chronological tables and Buddhist precepts and rules of training. Translation is smooth, colloquial, and readable."

CHINA

by EMIL SCHULTHESS

Supplementary text by Emil Egli, Edgar Snow, and Harry Hamm; Foreword by Hans Keller

In this new book—outsize, superbly printed, and containing 72 pages in full color—a world-famous photographer and his co-authors give a fresh interpretation of modern China.

Schulthess's text-and-picture diary from two journeys through all regions of China in 1964 and 1965 presents colorful accounts of his experiences, and the people and places he saw and photographed. Edgar Snow, the well-known American journalist, gives an objective and penetrating analysis of the factors that caused China to adopt Communism. German journalist Harry Hamm, in a section on "Revolutionary China in Transition," discusses the problems of China and its 700,000,000 people today. Professor Emil Egli contributes an enlightening study of the geography and climate of China and the ways in which these have affected social and economic conditions throughout the country's history. Dr. Hans Keller, Swiss ambassador to Peking, provides an appreciative Foreword.

Warlord

Yen Hsi-shan in Shansi Province, 1911-1949

By Donald G. Gillin

This is an enquiry into the dynamics of local and regional government in China, as illustrated by the policies of the warlord Yen Hsi-shan. The schemes Yen tried to carry out in Shansi constitute one of the last systematic attempts to bring about reform in China along conservative lines. One of the first scholarly studies of a major Chinese warlord, this book should be of interest to all students of modern China.

The Korean Communist Movement, 1918-1948

By Dae-Sook Suh

In this study of the origins and development of the old Communist Movement in Korea, Professor Suh shows that it was not the old Communist revolutionaries who came to power in North Korea after the 1945 partition, but a new group led by Kim Il-sŏng under the aegis of the Russians. His evidence refutes the myth propagated by the present leaders of North Korea in which Kim plays a role similar to those of Lenin and Mao Tse-tung.

STRANGERS AT THE GATESocial Disorder in South China, 1839-1861.*

FREDERIC WAKEMAN, JR. In his lively account of events in the Canton area during the Opium War and the Taiping Rebellion, Mr. Wakeman has used local history to test certain hypotheses posed by earlier writers about the effects of Western imperialism on 19th-century China. His book opens with the famous San-yuan-li incident, when the Chinese peasantry rose against the British invaders; it describes the prevailing rural discontent, urban riots, and the imbalance of class and clan in the countryside. The book is a striking re-creation of one of the most controversial periods in Chinese history. A publication of the Center for Chinese Studies. $6.00

POSTWAR ECONOMIC GROWTH IN JAPAN

Edited by RYUTARO KOMIYA. Translated from the Japanese by Robert S. Ozaki. Unlike most other comparable studies, this collection of papers by young, non-Marxist economists was published originally for a Japanese readership. Each of the contributors discusses a single aspect of the contemporary economy. No other recent book in English affords a better overview of postwar economic growth in Japan than this account. A publication of the Center for Japanese and Korean Studies. $7.50

THE COMMUNIST MOVEMENT IN IRAN

SEPEHR ZABIH. Communism has had a relatively long history in Iran, where it first came to public notice in 1920, but Mr. Zabih's is the first comprehensive study of its evolution there to appear in print. From one standpoint he treats the Iranian experience as a reflection of the shifts that have marked Soviet diplomacy in the Middle East; from another he deals with the indigenous strains of the communist movement in Iran, and examines the responses of traditional and of modern elements to communist initiatives in this underdeveloped country. $6.00

THE NEW COMPARATIVE MYTHOLOGY

An Anthropological Assessment of the Theories of Georges Dumézil. c. SCOTT LITTLETON. A thoughtful assessment of the theories and methods developed by one of the greatest figures in the movement to relate myth to social structure and function: Georges Dumézil of the Collège de France. Dumézil has attempted to reconstruct functional values in ancient Indo-European mythology, namely, to assign three essential kinds of function to all societies claiming Indo-European descent.

WHO'S WHO IN COMMUNIST CHINA

Drawing on its own extensive biographical files, on major Chinese Communist publications and on selected foreign publications, Union Research Institute of Hong Kong has compiled its first English language edition of Who's Who in Communist China. The book provides succinct and accurate historical data on 1,200 individuals to assist those seriously concerned with Communist China affairs.

Professor A. Doak Barnett, Columbia University, says in his introduction that Who's Who in Communist China is "not only a valuable reference book containing basic information on particular leaders in Communist China but also an important source of material for the study of many broad questions, both historical and contemporary, relating to leadership and politics in China."

TAIWAN-Ilha Formosa

- A Geography in Perspective -

Already established as the standard reference on Taiwan, this text provides a full evaluation of the strategic importance of the Island, in terms of its physical, economic, political and cultural structure. These features, combined with a complete historical survey of Taiwan's development, from the dawn of history to the present, make this volume ideally suited to the requirements of all students and scholars who require a firm understanding of the reasons for the world's current interest in this island.

CHINA: A Brief Geographic Introduction

By Chiao-min Hsieh, The Catholic University of America. Approximately 144 pages; about $1.45 (paper). Available January, 1967.

Here is a broad geographic overview of China which considers her present prospects and problems in relation to her long historical and cultural development. Individual chapters evaluate her world position, boundaries, basic physical features, the shifting of her capitals, the rise and fall of her dynasties, her unlimited manpower, and her ancient culture—which is challenged by new ideology.

CHINA: Emerging World Power

By Victor P. Petrov, Shippensburg State College. Approximately 144 pages; about $1.45 (paper). Available January, 1967.

This book explores the industrial capabilities of China within the framework of her general economic development and relates that capability to an evaluation of her potential as a super world power. It provides an analysis soundly based on the geographic factors—a study of China's topography, population, transportation, and natural resources.

THE NORTHERN TIER: Afghanistan, Iran, and Turkey

By Rouhollah K. Ramazani, University of Virginia. 142 pages; $1.45 (paper). Just Published.

Utilizing the concept of the Northern Tier to identify clearly the factors and forces that assist or retard the processes of regional fusion, this study systematically considers the interaction of basic geographic, cultural socioeconomic and political factors which cut across national frontiers. The author demonstrates how dynamic forces now at work may produce the merger of these countries in the future.

A HISTORY OF SINO-INDIAN RELATIONS

Hostile Co-Existence

By John Rowland. Approximately 250 pages; about $6.95. Just Published.

Is Red China willing to risk general war in its drive to accommodate an exploding population and to project its power throughout the world? Rowland probes this Red Chinese enigma which dominates United States foreign policy thinking and discusses the importance of India-Red China hostility as an index of Peking's attitude toward war and aggression.

The History of Sumatra

By WILLIAM MARSDEN; introduction by JOHN BASTIN, University of London. Originally published in 1783, this book has ever since remained a standard work on Sumatra. Dr. Bastin observes that "it was precisely because Marsden sought to establish 'a regular series of authenticated facts' and to describe 'things as they exist, rather than to display the powers of a creative imagination' that explains why the History won immediate recognition as a model of descriptive composition . . . and why it has continued to enjoy general esteem." 27 plates, map. ## Indonesia

Social and Cultural Revolution

SECOND EDITION

By S. TAKDIR ALISJAHBANA, University of Malaya. This edition contains two new and extensive essays, one analyzing the importance of art in Indonesian life, and one which surveys the personality, role, and political activities of Sukarno. After a brief analysis of the roots of both Indonesian and Western culture, the author focuses his attention on the problems which have arisen as a result of the confrontation of modern European culture with the traditional culture of Indonesia. There follows a careful study of the changes which are occurring in education, literature, legal thinking, the arts, the place of women, economic enterprise, ideology, and politics. $4.30

Henri Mouhot's Diary

Travels in the Central Parts of Siam, Cambodia and Laos during the Years 1858-61

Edited by CHRISTOPHER PYM. Henri Mouhot, the renowned nineteenth-century explorer who rediscovered the ancient Khmer civilization, fired the imagination of the Western world with his writings about the ruined temples of Angkor Wat and Angkor Thom. His diary, reprinted here, was recovered from the forest where he died and brought to France. It covers four main expeditions from Bangkok into the interior of Indochina. Besides describing the monolithic ruins of Angkor, he writes about the country, its flora and fauna, and its people—from kings to primitive tribes in northeast Cambodia. 14 plates, 3 maps. (An Oxford in Asia Historical Reprint) $5.10

The Policy and Administration of the Dutch in Java

By CLIVE DAY; introduction by JOHN BASTIN, University of London. Originally published in 1904, this book has also been published in Dutch translation, and has served as a text for the Leydon Indological Faculty. A standard work on the subject, it gives the significant results of the experiences of the Dutch in their most important dependency. Professor Day examines early commerce of the Dutch in the east, the establishment of the East India Company, its policies, its decline and fall, the state of Java after the fall of the Company, and the events leading to the establishment of British rule, the restoration of Dutch rule, and its policy and reform. THE UNITED STATES AND THE PHILIPPINES

An American Assembly Book

Edited by Frank H. Golay, Professor of Asian Studies and Associate Director, Cornell University Southeast Asia Program.

Although the U.S.—Philippine “special relationship” was preceded by war, American colonialism, and Filipino resentment, the contributors to this book point out benefits gained by both countries through trade, investment, mutual security, and the exchange of culture. Eight scholars—four Filipino and four American—here analyze the forces that have molded the “special relationship” in the past and can transform it in the future. They discuss the challenges facing both nations as America begins a gradual reduction of her presence and influence in recognition of the Philippine desire for independence and sovereignty. 1966, cloth $3.95, paper $1.95

THAILAND, BURMA, LAOS & CAMBODIA

by John F. Cady, Professor of History, Ohio University; past Chairman of the Research Committee for Southeast Asia of the Association for Asian Studies.

The four Theravada Buddhist countries of neighboring Vietnam are today uneasy neighbors. The author of this book shows how varying responses to colonialism and two world wars caused these Asian states to become highly disparate political entities, distinct from one another and from the world beyond Southeast Asia. Examining the historical and political influence of Indian religion upon these peoples, Professor Cady asserts that “the long-established Indian kingship tradition militates effectively today against popular acceptance of Western principles of popular sovereignty and representative government”. His detailed study of the history and development of the “Lands of the White Umbrella and the Sacred Sword” provides necessary perspective on this complex, turbulent region. 1966, cloth $4.95, paper $1.95
