Studies in Social and Political Theory

Anthony Giddens

In this book Giddens elaborates the arguments in his New Rules of Sociological Method, through a collection of his classic essays and some entirely new and substantial pieces. They are unified by a concern with some fundamental problems of social theory: method and epistemology, social development and transformation, the origins of sociology and social science as critique. The classic essays have been extended and developed while the new essays particularly Some issues in the Social Sciences today, Positivism and its critics and A theory of suicide represent important new contributions.

Contents: Introduction; some issues in the social sciences today 1 Positivism and its critics; Max Weber on facts and values 2 Functionalism: après la lutte; Notes on the theory of structuration 3 Habermas's critique of hermeneutics 4 Hermeneutics, ethnomethodology and the problems of interpretative analysis; Max Weber on interpretative sociology 5 Marx, Weber and the development of capitalism; Marx and Weber: problems of class structure 6 Four myths in the history of social thought 7 Durkheim's political sociology 8 The 'individual' in the writings of Emile Durkheim; Durkheim on social facts 9 A theory of suicide; The suicide problem in French sociology 10 'Power' in the writings of Talcott Parsons; Remarks on the theory of Power.
