Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from all scholars, including research students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, together with a duplicate copy, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing and, preferably, conform to the styling of The China Quarterly.

The China Quarterly is published by the Contemporary China Institute of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the Contemporary China Institute.

Japan, China and the Modern World Economy

Towards a Reinterpretation of East Asian Development c. 1600 to c. 1918

FRANCES V. MOULDER

Why, of the two great Asian societies, was it Japan rather than China that developed into an industrialized capitalist society in the 19th and early 20th centuries? Professor Moulder shows the similarities between Japanese and Chinese traditions and argues that there was less economic penetration and political control of Japan by imperialist nations.

China's Economic Revolution

ALEXANDER ECKSTEIN

Since 1949 China's leaders have attempted to launch the country on a path of modern economic growth within a socialist framework. The author discusses the liabilities and resources inherited from the past and the manner in which new institutions and an ideology have been developed to attain new economic goals.

Democracy and Organisation in the Chinese Industrial Empire 1948-1953

WILLIAM BRUGGER

Dr Brugger examines how a new system of factory management was implemented in China after the liberation of 1948-49.

He shows how the attempt by the Chinese Communist Party to combine a commitment to broad participation in management by industrial workers with a rigid system of control failed, and paved the way for the rejection of the Soviet model in the 1950s.
