Cambridge Journals

Review of International Studies

Founded in 1974 as the flagship journal of the British International Studies Association, Review of International Studies serves the needs of scholars in international relations and related fields such as politics, history, law, and sociology. From 1998 the Review of International Studies has a new team of Editors based in the largest department of international politics in Europe. The Review continues to publish a significant number of high quality research articles grouped according to key themes, and review articles which survey new contributions to the field. Other innovations include the introduction of a 'forum' section to accommodate debates and replies; occasional interviews with leading scholars; 'teaching articles' and more review articles.

TOCQUEVILLE'S REVENGE

State, Society, and Economy in Contemporary France

JONAH D. LEVY

France has long been characterized as a statist or dirigiste political economy, with state "strength" predicated on autonomy from a weak and divided civil society. Jonah Levy shows that this disdain for societal and local institutions has come back to haunt French officials. The absence of societal partners undermined the operation of dirigiste policymaking in the 1970s and early 1980s and has made it difficult to forge alternative forms of economic coordination in the post-dirigiste period. Levy argues that just as the French state has been weakened by an absence of societal and local partners, French civil society has been weakened by the absence of a supportive state.

Rethinking MARXISM

A Journal of Economics, Culture, and Society

The aim of the journal is to stimulate interest and debate over the explanatory power and social consequences of Marxian economic and social analysis. To that end, it publishes studies that seek to discuss, elaborate, and/or extend Marxian theory. The concerns of the journal include theoretical and philosophical (methodological and epistemological) matters as well as more concrete empirical analysis – all work that leads to the further development of a distinctively Marxian discourse. Contributions are encouraged from people in many disciplines and from a wide range of perspectives. It is the editors' belief that Marxian approaches to social theory are important for developing strategies toward radical social change—in particular, for ending class exploitation and the various forms of political, cultural, and psychological oppression including oppression based on race and gender. Research that explores these and related issues from a Marxian perspective are particularly welcome.

Visiting Fellowships 2000–2001

Center of International Studies
Princeton University

The Center of International Studies (CIS) at Princeton University invites applications for Visiting Fellowships for the academic year 2000–2001. The CIS will award eight to ten fellowships to college and university faculty and professionals interested in contributing to research and writing on international relations and national development. Fellows participate in a weekly seminar and other activities of the Center. They have access to Firestone Library and the many facilities of Princeton University. Teaching opportunities can be explored on an individual basis.

Applicants are expected to have a doctorate or a professional postgraduate degree; they may not be in the process of writing a dissertation. The application deadline is December 15, 1999, for fellowships beginning September 2000. Information and an application can be obtained by writing to Visiting Fellowships, Center of International Studies, Bendheim Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544-1022; or from the Center's website at <http://www.wws.princeton.edu/~cis>.

Civilian Control of the Military

The Changing Security Environment
Michael C. Desch

“Desch’s view that a declining focus on external threats will make civil-military relations worse is an important one—especially in a world where domestic conflicts vastly outnumber international wars. This is an important book that is likely to make a significant contribution to the field.”—Steven R. David, The Johns Hopkins University

Rabin and Israel’s National Security

Efraim Inbar

“Specialists would undoubtedly regard this book’s publication as providing the definitive work of scholarship and interpretation of Yitzhak Rabin’s historic role in the evolution of Israel’s national security doctrines and practices. Its best features include meticulous, exhaustively thorough research, clear organization, and a straightforward prose style blessedly free from military or political science jargon.”—Samuel W. Lewis, former Ambassador of the United States to Israel

The Politics of Verification

Nancy W. Gallagher

How to evaluate compliance is among the most difficult questions that arise during treaty negotiations and ratification debates. Nancy Gallagher explores the causes of verification controversies and the processes through which they are perpetuated or provisionally resolved. By examining nuclear test ban negotiations from the Eisenhower through the Clinton administrations, Gallagher finds that the assumptions about verification that have dominated U.S. policy shape domestic debates in ways that hinder stable agreement on significant test restrictions.

Multilateral Negotiations

Lessons from Arms Control, Trade, and the Environment
Fen Osler Hampson with Michael Hart

“Although there are more instances and many case studies of multilateral negotiations, there are almost no conceptual—let alone theoretical—studies of the subject . . . Fen Hampson has rendered a great service in helping to fill this gap by testing and deriving insights about multilateral decision making from a number of empirical exercises. The work is a major contribution to understanding an important diplomatic activity and to opening up a new field of analysis.”—I. William Zartman, American Political Science Review

Entangling Relations

American Foreign Policy in Its Century
David A. Lake

Throughout the twentieth century, the U. S. has wrestled with two central questions. Should it pursue its security unilaterally or in cooperation with others? If the latter, how can its interests be best protected against opportunism by untrustworthy partners? In a major attempt to explain security relations from an institutionalist approach, David A. Lake shows how the answers to these questions have differed after World War I, during the Cold War, and today.

"This is the most ambitious, most successful attempt yet to bring under a single, conceptual framework the strategic choices available to a state seeking to enhance its security: empire, alliance, and unilateralism. This is a major contribution to the field of international politics."—Jack Snyder
