The Hope of Progress

P. B. MEDAWAR

A collection of essays and lectures, the principal piece being an argument for believing in the ability of science to solve the problems it has itself created, and which too many of us believe insoluble. £2.00

The Psychology of Imagination

JEAN-PAUL SARTRE

The first of Sartre's serious philosophical works, this is a valuable introduction to his philosophy as a whole, introducing many of the ideas which were to become central to his later work. Mary Warnock provides an illuminating introduction.

PHILOSOPHICAL BOOKS

Philosophical Books, edited by Professor J. Kemp, was started in 1960 with the object of assisting librarians and individuals in the choice of books in the field of philosophy. Reviews in the professional journals often appear some considerable time after the publication of the book, while reviews in the general weeklies are often inadequate in length and in quality for professional purposes. The aim of Philosophical Books is to provide reviews that are both reasonably prompt and of a high professional standard. Reviews are normally between 300 and 1,000 words in length, though they are occasionally longer. The journal appears three times a year, in January, May and October. Paper covered. 36 pp. Subscription £1.00. (U.S. $3.00) per year. Single copies 35p.

Oppositions of Religious Doctrines: A Study in the Logic of Dialogue among Religions

William A. Christian

Philosophy of Religion

General Editor: John Hick

This essay in critical philosophy of religion comprises a study of the logic of conversations among proponents of different religions. The author examines doctrines of the major religions in detail placing special emphasis on the philosophical problem of how oppositions of these doctrines are possible.

£2.80

Aesthetics: An Introduction

Ruth L. Saw

Modern Introductions to Philosophy

General Editor: D. J. O'Connor

This book is a thorough introduction to the traditional questions which arise in the study of the nature of art. Dr. Saw, with the experience of a lifetime of teaching philosophy to undergraduates, clarifies the temptations which aesthetics offers to its practitioners, and shows why and how they should be overcome.

£2.95 paper: £1.75

Two titles in New Studies in Practical Philosophy

General Editor: W. D. Hudson

Applications of Moral Philosophy

R. M. Hare

'I became a moral philosopher because I was troubled about practical moral questions', writes Professor Hare. This book publishes, in many cases for the first time, some of the results of his efforts to clarify these questions.

£1.95

Essays on the Moral Concepts

R. M. Hare

The controversial and original views of Professor Hare have contributed greatly to our understanding of the moral concepts. This volume brings together most of his main polemical writings in this field in essays distinguished by a clear and close reasoning.

£1.95

Macmillan

Sympathy and Ethics

A Study of the Relationship between Sympathy and Morality with Special Reference to Hume's Treatise

PHILIP MERCER

Hume saw sympathy as communication of feeling and its importance for him stemmed from its place in his account of the genesis of the moral feelings. Yet against the logical richness of sympathy Hume's concept appears restricted and virtually technical. The author argues that the full ethical significance of sympathy can only be understood when its practical aspect is emphasized. £2.40

MUIRHEAD LIBRARY OF PHILOSOPHY

Ludwig Wittgenstein: philosophy and language

Edited by Alice Ambrose and Morris Lazerowitz

A collection of new studies which attempts to elucidate and critically assess Wittgenstein's reflections on some important problems in our conception of the nature of philosophy.

They include a memoir of the philosopher by his former pupil, Alice Ambrose.

£5.25

Mental Images a defence

ALASTAIR HANNAY

The author maintains that ordinary usage is justified in talking of 'mental images' and it is the philosophers (Ryle, Shorter, Sartre and others) who have misled. By detailed analysis he shows how the descriptive needs of imaging can, in fact, be used as a measure of the success or failure of these philosophers in vindicating their theories.

£4.95

Broad's Critical Essays in Moral Philosophy

Edited by DAVID CHENEY

Here is the whole of Professor Broad's expressed thought on the philosophical problems of ethics, covering a wide range of topics including Conscience, Free Will, the Doctrine of Consequences, Motives and Emotions.

Art, Perception, and Reality

E. H. Gombrich, Julian Hochberg, & Max Black

In 'The Mask and the Face: The Perception of Physiognomic Likeness in Life and Art,' E. H. Gombrich raises the question of how we recognize likeness—of facial expression, of a portrait or caricature in relation to its object, or in a series of portraits of the same person.

Julian Hochberg rejects the theory of empathy as well as traditional empiricist and more recent Gestaltist theories. He suggests instead that the expectancies aroused in the scanning processes of visual perception account for recognition of likeness. The book concludes with an essay by Max Black 'How Do Pictures Represent?' He shows that no criteria for defining conditions of representation have been established and concludes that representation is a cluster concept.

Nietzsche's Thought of Eternal Return

Joan Stambaugh

Nietzsche's own statements on eternal return are insolubly contradictory, and they cannot even be reconciled in light of Nietzsche's standing within the traditional metaphysical dualism of subject-object prevalent since Descartes. Thus, after presenting the various theories of eternal return in Nietzsche's writings, Joan Stambaugh explores the extent to which Nietzsche was influenced by the idea of a cyclical time dominant in Greek philosophy and by the idea of rebirth present in Eastern thought. This leads ultimately to the suggestion of a new theory of time and to a rethinking of the relation of time and eternity.

144 pages    £3.60

Contemporary Philosophy in Scandinavia

Edited by Raymond E. Olson & Anthony M. Paul

Few contemporary Scandinavian philosophers have been widely published in English, and this collection of papers by thirty-two philosophers offers the English-speaking reader one of the first representative samplings of current thought. The book is organized by topic—logic, philosophy of language, epistemology and the philosophy of science, ethics, and political, social, and legal philosophy, and includes historical and interpretive studies.
