

Corrigendum

An unsettled debate: Key empirical and theoretical questions are still open – CORRIGENDUM

Stefano Vincini,^a Yuna Jhang,^b Eugene H. Buder,^{c,d} and Shaun Gallagher^{d,e,f}

^aUNAM Postdoctoral Fellowships Program, Instituto de Investigaciones Filosóficas, Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México, Ciudad Universitaria, C.P. 04510, Mexico City, Mexico; ^bDepartment of Speech Language Pathology and Audiology, Chung Shan Medical University, Taichung 40201, Taiwan; ^cSchool of Communication Sciences and Disorders, The University of Memphis, Memphis, TN 38152; ^dThe Institute for Intelligent Systems, The University of Memphis, Memphis, TN 38152; ^eDepartment of Philosophy, The University of Memphis, Memphis, TN 38152; ^fFaculty of Law, Humanities and the Art, University of Wollongong, Wollongong, NSW 2522, Australia

doi:10.1017/S0140525X16001977. Published by Cambridge University Press, 13 December 2017

Yuna Jhang's affiliation was incorrectly listed in the original online version of this commentary on the target article by Keven & Akins (2017). The correct affiliations are listed above and have been corrected in the original commentary.

References

- Keven, N. & Akins, K. A. (2017) Neonatal imitation in context: Sensorimotor development in the perinatal period. Behavioral and Brain Science 40:e381.
Vincini, S., Jhang, Y., Buder, E. H. & Gallagher, S. (2017) An unsettled debate: Key empirical and theoretical questions are still open. Behavioral and Brain Science 40:e401.
<https://doi:10.1017/S0140525X16001977>.