Theism, Atheism, and the Doctrine of the Trinity

W. Waite Willis, Jr.

This volume demonstrates the apologetic usefulness of the Christian doctrine of the Trinity for responding to the challenges of modern atheism as represented by Feuerbach, Camus, Marx, Adorno and Horkheimer. Utilizing materials from Karl Barth and Jurgen Moltmann, the study demonstrates how Trinitarian theology is iconoclastic towards either theism or atheism.

Religion, Ideology, and Heidegger's Concept of Falling

Gregory Tropea

Investigates the fundamental structures of human existence and self-understanding by tracing the ideas of religion and theology, as articulated through Heideggerian constructs, from Anselm to Democratic Capitalism. Tropea's subtle exploration serves as both a work of historical scholarship and an experiment in the utilization of Heidegger's way of thinking on topics as diverse as politics and technology.

Ernst Troeltsch: Systematic Theologian of Radical Historicality

Toshimasa Yasukata

A detailed study and interpretation of Ernst Troeltsch which discerns the "systematic unified thought" of the German theologian's life work. Despite the obvious diversity of Troeltsch's interests and published works, the author concludes that Troeltsch was thoroughly consistent in exploring the possibility of establishing normative values.

*"People are beginning to acknowledge that perhaps (Thomas Berry's)
are ideas whose time has come."*

—MICHAEL FARRELL, National Catholic Reporter

Cultural historian Thomas Berry is deeply concerned about keeping the world alive. His esteemed work at the Center for Religious Research has been critically analyzing the very dynamics of the planet earth and the role humans must fulfill within the entire universe.

In Thomas Berry and the New Cosmology, edited by Anne Lonergan and Caroline Richards, you will confront Geologist Berry's 12 principles. They will change how you think, and offer you a new vision of the created order—a new cosmology.

Embark on the exciting adventure of studying this stimulating book. You won't be setting out alone. You'll witness a profound and provocative dialogue between Berry and a group of respected theologians, a philosopher and a scientist. At issue are Berry's views on religious unity as well as the world's economics and life systems.

Berry's responses will help you continue this important dialogue within your soul, your conscience, your life.
