MODERN CHINESE SOCIETY

An Analytical Bibliography

1. Publications in Western Languages, 1644-1972

Edited by G. William Skinner

2. Publications in Chinese, 1644-1969

Edited by G. William Skinner & Winston Hsieh

3. Publications in Japanese, 1644-1971

Edited by G. William Skinner & Shigeaki Tomita

This pioneering research aid places over 31,000 works on traditional, Republican, and Communist China in all languages within a single frame of reference. Prepared specifically for social scientists and institutional historians, the volumes provide both retrospective and current bibliographic control of the secondary literature on Chinese society, the Chinese economy and polity, and personality and culture in China from the beginning of the Ch'ing dynasty to the present. Each entry is coded as to topic, time period, geographic region, type of local or regional system to which the work refers (village, market town, city-centered system, etc.), and the kinds of research on which it is based. In all volumes, headings are in English, Chinese, and Japanese. Chinese and Japanese publications are cited in characters as well as romanization, and all non-English titles are given an English rendering. Cross-tabulating the codes for all entries, computer programs have prepared a subject index by historical period, a subject index by geographical area, and a local-systems index. In addition to the three analytical indexes that are this bibliography's most distinctive feature, conventional author and subject indexes are included.

Vol. 1. 880 pages, 13,057 entries, $35.00

Vol. 2. 880 pages, 11,215 entries, $38.00

Vol. 3. 608 pages, 7,169 entries, $32.00

A Nation in the Making The Philippines and the United States, 1899-1921

Peter W. Stanley

Mr. Stanley newly interprets both Philippine history and the nature of American imperialism. Drawing extensively upon manuscript sources in both the Philippines and the United States, he shows that the early years of Fil-American relations were a historical fulcrum for both peoples. Harvard Studies in American-East Asian Relations, 4. $12.00

Land Taxation in Imperial China, 1750-1911

Yeh-chien Wang

Yeh-chien Wang provides a reliable estimate and an in-depth analysis of Imperial China's principal source of public revenue, the land tax, in the Ch'ing period. The approach used by the author is both institutional and quantitative as he studies how the land-tax system worked and how much revenue was produced from this source. Harvard East Asian Series, 73. $8.95

A Study of Samurai Income and Entrepreneurship

Kozo Yamamura

The samurai class was the political and military elite of the Tokugawa era and a significant social force in the Meiji period as well. Using modern economic theory and nondeterministic economic models the author offers four hypotheses concerning the possible relationship between a decline in the samurai standard of living and the fall of the shogunate. Harvard East Asian Series, 76. $11.00

INDIAN CAMERALISM. Professor K. V. Rangaswami Aiyangar.

A comparative study of Indian and Western political theories. In English. 184 pages. Cameralism represents the ideas of a school of social thought, which had a great vogue on the continent of Europe from the 15th to the 18th centuries to which German economics is indebted. The name is derived from German Kammer (chamber), which was the designation of the administrative and advisory body of experts found in most German states at that time. The "Kammer" dealt not only with purely economic questions like agriculture and industry, finance, and taxation but also with police and law. The author has given the title INDIAN CAMERALISM to this study largely based on Arthasastra. ALS 66. Cat. #7267. $4.00

SOUTHEAST ASIA;

Bibliographic Directions in a Complex Area

by Paul Bixler

We in America know less about Southeast Asia than any other part of the world – no area is in greater need of clarification, understanding, and informative context. In this bibliographical essay Mr. Bixler points the college librarian, the undergraduate student, and the general reader toward a basic knowledge of Burma, Thailand, Indochina, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Brunei, the Philippines, and the Overseas Chinese. A revised and updated edition of Mr. Bixler's Southeast Asia Studies, A Basic Bibliography, which first appeared in CHOICE in 1972–1973, this essay ranges over government, economics, education, the arts, communication, history, literature, and anthropology, forming a pattern of what the author calls “human and bibliographical ecology.”

Mr. Bixler, Librarian Emeritus of Antioch College, was the General Editor of the five-part Libraries in the Far East published in Library Journal.

Asceticism and Eroticism in the Mythology of Śiva

WENDY DONIGER O'FLAHERTY. Structural methods previously unexploited by Indologists are applied here to a mythology that has, for the most part, never been translated from the Sanskrit. The author examines a wide range of Indian texts—Vedic, Puranic, classical, modern, and tribal—in light of a dialectic pattern of interlocking motifs which center upon the great ascetic Śiva, and his erotic alter ego, Kāma. Khamsing Srinawk (Lao Khamhawm)

The Politician and Other Stories

Edited by MICHAEL SMITHIES; translated by DOMNERN GARDEN. Khamsing Srinawk's realistic stories of rural life occupy an unusual position in Thai literature. Their unsentimental tone, mordant humor, and clear social criticism are distinct from the usual Thai romantic novelettes. The problems of the slowly growing contact between the urban government and the villages are at the center of these twelve stories. (Oxford in Asia Modern Authors)
