Chairman of the Editorial Board

The Nutrition Society has as its object the advancement of the scientific study of nutrition and its application to the maintenance of human and animal health.

Membership is open to any whose work has contributed to the scientific knowledge of nutrition, whether such work has been in the laboratory, the field or the clinic, and whether experimental, clinical, agricultural or statistical in nature.

Particulars of The Nutrition Society and application forms for membership may be had from the Honorary Secretary, Dr J. D. SUTTON, The Nutrition Society, Chandos House, 2 Queen Anne Street, London W1M 9LE.

The Proceedings of The Nutrition Society, published by the Cambridge University Press, in part, record meetings of the Symposium type, at which experts in a particular field are invited by Council to make contributions on specific parts thereof and at which general discussion follows these invited contributions. The contributions will be published in extenso; such summaries of the ensuing discussion as circumstances warrant may also be published. The Society also holds scientific meetings at which papers are communicated by members and others on original work carried out by them. It is proposed at present to publish summaries of the papers read at each meeting, each communication being recorded in the Society's Proceedings by means of an abstract not exceeding in length 400 words or the equivalent space in print. The Proceedings are published three times a year.

The British Journal of Nutrition is published by the Cambridge University Press for The Nutrition Society, which owns it and controls its publication. It is devoted to reports of original work in all branches of nutrition, the term 'original work' not implying that the papers must invariably be based on new facts. The British Journal of Nutrition does not print reviews of the literature or polemical articles, but the Editorial Board is willing to consider original articles critically re-examining published information and the conclusions drawn from it. A volume consists of three parts; two volumes are published each year.
